Theme: “Boundaries in Pharmaceutical GMP and the Cross over to Other Industries”

When/Where: Somerset, NJ Holiday Inn May 21, 2013

Jointly Sponsored by ASQ Food Drug & Cosmetic Division and ASQ Princeton Section # 307

Basics:

Quality professionals need to acquire knowledge, tools, and techniques for improvement and change. These presentations will prepare quality professionals to acquire the basics and stay ahead of present quality practices and tools.

Compliance Issues:

Regulatory non-compliance costs the life sciences industry billions of dollars in fines, recalls, audits and more. Compliance teams do critically important work across a wide range of functions, but they face a raft of challenges. The focus of presentations would include strengthening the role of compliance, management oversight, Quality System Regulations, national and international standards.

Benchmarking Drug Safety and Pharmacovigilance: Use benchmarking to reinforce industry thinking around group structure and tools. Drug teams must stay up to date on all agency changes, but that sometimes means working under one governing guidance while contradictory draft guidance awaits approval. Implement best practices to resolve such confusion as you improve your company's communication processes with regulatory agencies, including the Food and Drug Administration.
